This October we are delighted to offer our 12th Healing Camp with Eliot Cowan at the Blue Deer Center. With the sound of the stream echoing throughout the property and soothing all that it passes, the ancestral blessings of the land, the plant spirits, and the indescribable peace and beauty of the surrounding area, the Blue Deer Center is a perfect venue for healing camp. Offered for the past 9 years in various locations around the United States, Eliot Cowan's healing camps have brought traditional Huichol healing sessions to people from all walks of life.

After he had re-discovered Plant Spirit Medicine and been practicing it for several years, Eliot found himself in a waiting room reading an article about the Huichol Indians. Feeling as if an electrical charge had passed through his body, Eliot immediately knew he had to go and find out about these people. After several years building relationship with Huichol shamans he was introduced to the late Guadalupe Gonzalez, who became his teacher. At that point, Eliot embarked upon a rigorous 12-year apprenticeship learning the healing traditions of the Huichols.

As he brought this healing back to his people, Eliot found its benefits could best be supported by a "healing camp" where the stress patterns of daily life are temporarily left behind. The camp creates a special sacred space which offers the opportunity to reconnect with ourselves, with others and with the natural world.

Healing camp is five days of traditional Huichol healing sessions with Eliot Cowan. Participation is limited to 15 people. The healing work is enhanced by activities that promote peace, joy, and connection with nature.
